Rise and Fall of the Bustle. What the Empress Eugenie was to the ladies of France and the prince of Wales is to the society men of England, so Mrs.

Grover Cleveland is in a degree to the fashlonable ladies of the new world. This is no better exemplified than in the gradual rejection of that time-honored institution-the bustle-through her influence. Only a few months ago Mrs. Cleveland, then the first lady of the land, looked with ill favor upon that artificial hump and completely discarded it. Nature had done a great deal for her, and she is so prettily formed, that she realized that the bustle was an unnecessary appendage as far as she was personally concerned. The effect has been magical, and to-day nine-tentus of the women of the country appear in shrunken proportions. First took the place of bustles, now most ladies appear without any artificial development, and the flattened effect appears strangely enough. The lady of good taste, as usual, wears reed; or a rudimentary bustle, or neither, as she appears to the best advantage, but many of e dear ladies are devout votaries of Fash ion, and taste is often offered in sacrifice to that goddess of modern growth. If any-thing is the fashion it must be followed. To do otherwise would be sacrilege. The bustle has been a uead letter in the eastern markets for a number of months, but of late it has been following the star of empire in its westward course, and the ladies of Omaha now appear as their reduced cous-

The bustle is of venerable ancestry, being a lineal descendant of the farthingali worn about the time of Queen Elizabeth of Eugland. After a sleep of a few centuries the farthingale again came into public notice about thirty years ago under the new name of the hoopskirt, and for a while grew to prodigious proposed the state of about the productions. proportions. After a reign of about ten years the front portion of the hoopskirt was eliminated, and the part remaining was styled a tilter. In the course of a few years the tilters became dwarfed into bustles, and with the maturity of this useful article came ridiculous pull-back. The bustle has tudes of fickle fashion and the jeers of man kind until Mrs. Cleveland appeared on the scene as a dress reformer and scaled its doom. For the present the bustle is con-spicuous by its absence, but a few snattered wrecks of it are left and these are masquerading under the name of "reeds."

Parnell Party at the Park. On Wednesday evening the members of the Parnell Social club gave their second party this summer at Hanscom park. There were seventy-five couples in attendance, who were transported to and from the park in capacious carryalls and the street cars charered for the occasion.

The music for the occasion was furnished by an orchestra with harps and violins, and the melody sounded very prettily in the open air. The opening refrain for the dancers was played at 9 o'clock. From that time until 12:30 a.m. the dancing was kept up almost unremittingly, with a brief intermission for cooling refreshments at 11:30. Twenty-three numbers were danced. The Twenty-three numbers were danced. The committee on arrangements consisted of B. C. Foley, Michael Kilgallon, Martin McKenna and William Selk; the floor committee of Barney Shields and John Nagle, and the members of the management committee also lent a helping hand. Mr. Ed O. Quinn bore most gracefully the honors of master of ceremonies, and William Boquet and lady led the grand march. The dance proved such a great success that the club will probably give another at the same place in three

Mr. W. K. Anderson, chief clerk in the freight office of the Union Pacific, was married Tuesday to Miss Mosille Eddy, of Bellevue. The ceremony occurred at the home of the bride and was witnessed by a few relatives and intimate friends. The same evening the newly married couple came to Omana and quietly went to housekeeping in a cottage on Twenty-sixth and Caldwell that is owned by the bridegroom. The same evening they were surprised by a sudden influx of friends, and before they could realize the situation they found themselves the recipients of numerous elegant wedding presents and the bosts of a surprise wedding reception. They gracefully ac cepted the situation and proved themselves royal entertainers. The bride is well known in Omaha, having been for some time a teacher in the Dodge street school. Both Mr. and Mrs. Anderson have a host of friends who wish the new partnership nothing but bliss and good fortune.

Fifteenth Wedding Anniversary. Monday was the Fifteenth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Peter O'Malley, and in the evening about fifty of their friends took possession of their house without a moment's warning and presented them with a handsome silver tea set. The presentation speech was made by Mr. J. T. Moriarty and sparkled with wit and good feel ing. Mr. O'Malley, who could scarcely re alize the situation, collected his faculties sufflorently to make a brief and graceful re-sponse. The evening passed pleasantly in social converse and at a seasonable hour the guests departed, wishing their hosts many happy returns of the day.

Full Dress Collars and Cuffs. The embroidery of full dress shirt fronts proved so popular with society men the past season that there are indications that this decorative fancy will be carried further the coming year, and the collars and cuffs worn with full dress suits will be likewise orna mented. Collars with embroidered points have occasionally been worn before, but this is probably the first instance in men's ap-parel in which the embroidery has been car-ried entirely around the edge of both collars and cuffs. With this apparel, taken in con-nection with an embroidered tie and embroidered vest, a young man may be quite decorative. This style promises to make a hit, as there is a tendency among society men to enliven the funereal garb worn as full dress at present. The use of tennis sashes for vests and of knickerbocker breeches for the present style of pantaloons have had many advocates among society men, but these styles would cruse too sudden and startling a change to please the conservative tastes of the majority. The embroidery spoken of above is more likely to find favor, as it is merely an improvement on a style at ready in vogue.

One of the jolliest events of the week among the upper circles was the party given by the young society people living in the fine block on Twenty-fourth and Cass, known as Clarke row. The affair was held in the only vacant house in the block. The floors of the double pariors were waxed for the oc of the double pariors were waxed for the occasion and good music was in attendance.
The affair was entirely informal, each contributing his or her share, the gentlemen having the care of the music and floor management and the ladies attending to the refreshments. A jolly evening was passed and at midnight the young people adjourned to Mr. H. T. Clark's dining hall, where the ladies had prepared most appetizing refreshments. The following composed the party: Misses Kittle and B. Lowe, Luna Dundy. Sharp, Perrine, Clark, Miller,

Reception to a Chicago Lady. Miss Veronica Daidy, of Chicago, who spending her vacation with her aunt. Mrs. J. F. Daley, of Prospect Hill, was tendered a reception Friday afternoon. About fifty young ladies welcomed Miss Daidy to the Gate City, and she in turn was untiring in her efforts to make all her guests happy. Judging from the pleasant manner in which all took part in the amusements and enjoyed the tempting refreshments, Miss Daidy proved a very capable entertainer.

Mr Sautter surprised. A very pleasant surprise party was tendered Mr. L. W. Snutter on Thursday evening at Hanscom park. About sixty couple were present. The party was gotten up by Miss Nellie Keline, Mr. M. C. Bascombe and Mr. Tom Croft, who provided refreshments consisting of ice cream, lemonade and cake. A very pleasant time was enjoyed by all, the party lasting until 1 a. m.

HONEY FOR THE LADIES.

Straight skirts, gathered or pleated waists and full sleeves, increase daily in still greater favor. An appropriate broach for the summer is a tiny cance of gold, with oars and anchor trailing over the side.

The fancy for low shoes over dark silk hose, even for promonade will be more than ever general this summer. The trideot of Neptune is now used as a scarf-pin. The center prong is studded with turquoise and the others with pearls.

Pretty boating costumes of dark-green or imiral-blue serge are worn at the seasid this summer, with vests, shoes, and long loose Swedish gloves of pale-tan Rid. The popularity of sailor hats is still so great that milliners here and abroad are using these simple flat-crowned, straight-brimmed shapes for airy models in net and

Where nothing but a slight protection for the shoulders is required are provided little Carrick capes which have a hundsomely trimmed collar with long bows and ends of ribbon beneath.

Directoire redingotes of beautiful French challi are worn over skirts of white watered silk, and flower-brocaded empire gowns of white mohair have plain full skirts trimmed with gold or silver galloon. Batistes, percales, and lineu lawas, with fine stripes, dots, or sprigs, are made with dainty dressing jackets which are pretty enough to be worn at the breakfast table at home, with skirts of plain white linen. The fine double-width light-weight English sorges have in a great degree taken the place of both summer cloth and flannel suits, fabrics which have so long been considered indispensable in the make-up of an outing wardrobe. Shade hats were never more charming nor in greater variety than this season. Even for the beach are wide shapes made of white or yellow lace. For garden parties there are lovely models that are both poetic and picturesque.

White dotted silk net, simply hemmed and twisted round the crown, caught here and there with tiny gold and pearl pins, is a popular trimming upon the fancy straw and rush hats for country wear, and a cloud-like halo graces the finer Milan braids. Blouse waists with belts all around, and busques with blouse fronts and girdles are favorite bodices on imported dresses of light textiles, such as gauze, lace, crepaline, India siks, and the soft transparent, old-fashioned lawns and muslins that have been revived by the leading French modistes. Bathing-caps this summer are made with some regards to good looks, and for the ugly oil slik models formerly used are substituted soft round-crowned hats of fancy water-proof silk or of black or cream-colored Chi-nese washing silk, which has been oilboiled for these uses, rendering it entirely

The black tollets this summer are marvels of refined elegance. They are favored of fashion for all occasions and in all fabrics. For evening are superb black net and lace toilets, trimmed with fine gold passementerie and draped over plain skirts and half-low bodices of gold-colored moire. Other models are of gold-embroidered tulle with demi-decollete Valois corsages, with flaring collar spreading to the shoulders, the sleeves hashed with insertions of gold embroidery Smart little summer jackets in various fabrics accompany the pleated shirt-waists so affected this summer. These waists are cool, comfortable, and very chic upon a slender, youthful figure. They have a turndown collar and sailor tie, are fastened with small gold studs, and are prottiest when made of white China silk laid in broad pleats, though the fashion admits of waists in endless variety, white linen, striped per-cale, serge, foulard, chambery, and flannel.

A horse while drawing a reaper near Clinton, N. J., bit off the heads of the standing wheat. After he had been at work about two hours he suddenly dropped to the ground and in five minutes was dead. On opening the throat the beards were found in great quantities sticking through the wind pipe, from the effects of which it is believed the animal choked to death.

A man named Robert Brown is credited with having recently killed a bear in a peculiar way when about five miles from Edge wood, N. Y. The animal was feeding or some berries when Brown first saw it. Tak ing off his coat, the hunter crept steathily up to within "throwing" distance, when he covered the brute's head and face with the garment. Before bruin could free himself from the unwelcome covering, Brown had got close enough to get his fingers around its throat. He squeezed hard, and the bear slowly but surely succumbed to the killing pressure and fell dead at the hunter's feet. A Correct on.

To the Editor of The Bee.—Dear Sir: In your issue of last Sunday, July 21, 1889, I noticed an item in the secret society column in which it stated that "Omaha Division No. 13, U. R. Now, as nonmander of said division and for the respect I have for the Uniform rank, K. of P., would say that Omaha division did not piccie on Sunday last, nor ever will with my permission while commander of said division, it being contrary to law for any division of the Uniform rank to give piccies on the Sabbath day. This order is growing rapidly and taking in the best of material. Very little was known about the fron Hall in Omaha until the supreme body met here two months ago. At that time the founder of the order, Mr. Somerby, gave an address on its aims and obects at the Grand opera house, and as a consequence two branches were at once formed, one composed exclusively of members of the board of trade. The other is presided over by Mr. Henry Creighton, chief justice, and is taking in from seven to ten members every Monday night. They are trying to engage a room in the A. O. U. W. hall, in the Barker block, as they find their present quarters over the Boyd opera house too cramped. There is a third branch now being formed and soon to be instituted. The Iron Hall pays weekly benefits, in case of sickness, of from $5 to $25, and at the end of seven years' membership the holder of a certificate draws in cash from $300 to $1,000. After being a member two years, should a member die, half the amount of his certificate is paid to his heirs in cash. In case of formed, one composed exclusively of mem-

B. P. O. E. Dr. Hyde, the dristrict deputy and repreentative of the Omaha lodge at the grand lodge of Elks, has returned. He reports the following officers as having been elected for the ensuing year: Dr. Simon Quinlan, of Chicago, exalted grand ruler; A. C. More land, of New York city, grand secretary; John B. Show, of Boston, grand treasurer; Edward Learkin, of Omaha, one of four trustees. The next meeting of the grand lodge will be held in Cleveland, O. The fact that the lodge decided to meet elsewhere than in New York city is of itself an important change, as the sessions have always been held in that city instead of different cities, as is the case with all other grand bodies. Omaha louge secured the lion's share of the official plums, having secured the dis-trict deputy and one of the trustees. This lodge is regarded as the banner lodge of the order, being one of the largest, having the best quarters and the best lodge gone ally.

THE WESTERN CATTLE MARKET. An Interview With Mr. W. A. Paxton

on the Subject. "What is the status of the cattle market in the west!" This query was put to Mr. William A.

Paxton by a reporter for THE BEE vesterday afternoon. "Over-production," replied Mr. Paxton. There's the whole thing in a nutshell. The business is vastly overdone. There is no longer any money in it, and while I don't intend to leave it all at once or altogether, I don't propose to work as hard at it hereafter as I have done."

"To what extent is the over production

"Well since the really nalmy days of the of cattle brought to market is about 60 per cent. Say from 1873 to 1884, there would be during the moaths of August, September and October from 1,000 to 7,000 head shipped in a day; say an average of 4,000. But that was when 90 per cont of the cattle that came to market were brought off the range, grass fed, and the receipts outside these mont did not amount to much of anything. No it is different. Ninety per cent are corn fed and the supply is constant, always in advance of the demand, which has its inevitable effect on the price of meat. I suppose that from 2,500 to 3,000 head of cattle reach the South Omaha market every day in the year. There are 'off days,' to be sure, but the figures of the state of the stat

There are 'off days,' to be sure, but the figures I give are a fair average.

"Do you ask where the cattle come from?" he continued. "Well, the farmers raise them. Every farmer has a few, no matter how little land he has. And the big farmers raise more. They seem to think there's a big profit in the business."

"Can these small farmers raise cattle as cheanly as they can be raised on the range?"

cheaply as they can be raised on the range?"
"Yes; cheaper, because they save them all.
On the range we lose 40 or 50 per cent of them. The cattle growing country tributary to Omaha is all of western Nebraska, most of Wyoming, and part of Colorado and Idaho. Omaha is independent of Chicago, but the latter is the packing center of the country, and will remain so, because she has shipping facilities that en-title her to it. Omaha used to ship most of her meat across the water, but very little goes over now.

"Will the farmers continue to bear the market in the future to the same extent as in the past five years!"
"Yes; more, probably. Prices are down to stay, and big profits are things of the past.

The fact that I am going to unload a part of my work and responsibility down at the stock yards don't mean that I'm going to pull my interest all out. I am satisfied that we have a management now that will make a success of the thing, and I'm content to leave matters in its hands."

Immanuel Baptist Church.

In September, 1887, Rev. F. W. Fester, then city missionary of the Baptists of Omaha, opened a Sunday school and began to hold preaching seavices in a store on Saunder street., Kountze place, between Looust and Binney streets. This was the first preaching service ever held in that part of Omaha.

On the 30th of April, 1888, the Immanuel church was organized with forty-four ment bers. From the time the mission was organized, the church and Sunday school have been meeting in a store which accomodates about one hundred and fifty people, but during the past few months this room has often been too small for the congregation. On July 8 last the trustees of this church closed a contract with Charles F. Luce, of Logan, Is., to buy a lot just north and adjoining their present room, to erect a chapel on the same at the cost of nearly $3,000, which will seat nearly 375 people. The building is to be completed October 1, of the present year. It will be 30x70 feet, with a room 20x20 for prayer and social meetings, and a gallery. The floor will be built on an incline, which will compensate for the length of the room will compensate for the length of the rooms somewhat. The baptistry and robing rooms will be pleasant and complete. Church and lot will be worth fully $8,300.

The attendance at services is large, and with the new building they will be greatly increased. During the year the member-ship has doubted. Large numbers of young people are finding a pleasant and profitable place of meeting and a cordial greeting is

The State Convention.

Aiready preparations are in progress for the state convention of Young Men's Christian associations, to be held in Omaha on the 24, 25, 26 and 27 of October. If the expectations of the sanguine ones are but half ful filled, the convention will be the largest and most important ever held in Nebraska. A Railroad Association at McCook

A petition signed by 117 railroad men of McCook, employes of the B. & M. road, has been received by the state committee of the Young Men's Christian association, requesting that a railroad association be organized there at an early date. Mr. Holdredge has been interviewed upor the subject, and so favorably does he regard it that an appropriation of $50 or $60 a month to pay the satary of a secretary will prob-ably se made. Rooms will be hired at any rate, and services conducted regularly, Baths, and possibly a gymnasium, though not probably the latter, will be added.

Commercial Travelers' Work. At the last meeting of the state committee of the Y. M. C. A. held in Omaha, Mr. F. C. Tuttle, of Omaha, was appointed a committee on commercial travelers' work in the state. But little is done at present to attract these men who should, for the fact that so many of their Sundays are spent away from home, be offered special inducements to bring their vim and breezy vigor to the support of the work. A small number of the association address cards of invitation to meetings at the rooms to commercial travelers remaining in their towns over Sunday. A broad, comprehensive plan for work in this field will be outlined and put in operation during the coming quarter. Notes. Aid to the amount of $275 was recently granted by the Board of Home Missions to Douglas, Wyo, and Rev. Thomas McCague, of this city, was appointed to the field. He will go at once to begin the work, and establish his headquarters at Douglas for the next six months.
